Brief Guide to the Architecture of Chicago, Illinois

Chicago is a city of firsts — and nowhere is this better seen than in its architecture. The site of the now demolished Home Insurance Building (1884 – 1885), credited as the world’s first skyscraper (at a diminutive 10 stories by today’s standards), you could write a book on the significance of the Chicago cityscape — which is why so many have.

Answer: In 1909 Burnham published his Plan of Chicago, which outlined his vision for the city’s built environment. Though much of Burnham’s plan was never realized, the park system lining the lakeshore—one of the things for which the city is known—came from it. Plan of Chicago has also served as inspiration for generations of urban ...
