Introduction. This chapter is concerned with the role played by implied trusts in resolving disputes over the ownership of the family home. It should be noted at the outset that the term 'family property' has no specialist meaning in English law: there is no special regime applicable to assets owned by a married couple or civil partners (save when they separate) or to those owned by cohabiting couples and other family members.

Implied trusts and the family home (Chapter 12) - Trusts Law

A trust is a three-party fiduciary relationship in which the first party, the trustor or settlor, transfers ("settles") a property (often but not necessarily a sum of money) upon the second party (the trustee) for the benefit of the third party, the beneficiary. A testamentary trust is created by a will and arises after the death of the settlor.
